

Dr Edward Barin is a Specialist Cardiologist focused on Arrhythmias, Implanted Devices, and Hypertension Biology. He is Clinical Associate Professor at Macquarie University and Co-Director of Cardiology in the MQ Health Cardiology Clinic at Macquarie University Hospital Health Sciences Centre.

He is accredited at Royal North Shore Hospital, Ryde Hospital, North Shore Private Hospital, and Macquarie University Hospital where he helps coordinate teaching and research programs in the University Hospital Clinic.

Having graduated with Honours at Sydney Medical School, Dr Barin holds a Master's Degree from its School of Public Health, and completed Postgraduate Training in London, England. He has previously directed the Pacemaker Clinic at RNS Hospital, and is also Adjunct Professor in the FEIT at University of Technology Sydney. He has been involved in device based, vascular and clinical research.

He is a founding Director of Macquarie Heart Chatswood.