

Dr Elizabeth Shaw is a structural and interventional Cardiologist who is currently working as a staff specialist at Hornsby Ku-ring-gai Hospital.

Dr Elizabeth Shaw is also lecturer at the The University of Queensland and has a special research interest in myocardial infarctions and their triggers in which she is currently completing a PhD at the University of Sydney.

She completed her Bachelor of Medicine, Bachelor of Surgery (MBBS) with Honours at The University of Sydney, Australia. She completed her Cardiology advanced training at Royal North Shore Hospital and then she undertook her Interventional fellowship at The Prince Charles Hospital, Brisbane, Australia. She then completed an advanced interventional fellowship in structural heart disease at the prestigious William Beaumont hospital in Michigan, America. She has extensive experience in coronary interventions and structural heart disease including complex PCI, TAVI, MitraClip, PFO/ASD closures and Watchman procedures.